We, the undersigned, in pursuance of our appointment, and in accordance with common usage, have carefully examined the Selectmen's books and compared them with the accompanying vouchers, and they agree, and the books have been correctly kept and balanced to the 22d instant. As the Selectmen are required to make and publish a report of all their receipts and expenditures annually, in relation to town affairs, for the inspection of inhabitants; therefore, any further remarks in relation to their financial transactions we think unnecessary.

SCHOOL REPORT.

TO THE CITIZENS OF EPPING:—It is a notorious fact, that school reports produce but a very limited, if any effect upon the public mind of this town. They are read only by a few, and many of those more in a spirit of carping criticism, than an honest desire to profit by their recommendations. The law, however, requires a report to be made, furnishing certain definite information respecting the schools and embodying such suggestions, as may be deemed expedient or useful in advancing their interests. In discharge of this obligation, your committee would submit in a plain and brief manner, the following report:

During the past year, there has been a gratifying improvement in most of your schools; they have been better taught, and better attended than the year previous, and consequently a very marked and decided progress in scholarship. Prudential committees have been unusually fortunate in the selection of teachers; many of experience, and some of decided ability have been employed, and in two instances the same teacher who taught the previous year has been retained, thus securing that continuous and uniform instruction, which is generally so desirable. While the average attendance is greater than formerly, a larger percentage of scholars having attended regularly, it is still too low; there can be no good and valid reason for so much absenteeism. Teachers were requested to exert their influence, and to adopt such rules and regulations, as would secure the constant attendance of their pupils, and there is every reason to believe they did all they could; still the records exhibit an absence of more than twenty per cent. If our best teachers are unable to excite and keep alive in the school room, such an interest as shall invite and attract their pupils, so their constant presence will be felt and considered a delight and pleasure rather than an irksome task; if an appeal to parents, stating plainly the great injury inflicted upon both scholar and school by irregular and partial attendance will have no effect, what should be done? Unquestionably, the law should be so altered as to compel an attendance, for there can be no good reason for a government to compel its citizens to sustain a system for public instruction in order to secure its stability and perpetuity, and then permit a part of its prospective citizens to stay away and grow up in ignorance.

So much has been said and written of late by School Commissioners, committees and educators in general, upon the subject of graded schools, their advantages so often demonstrated, that your committee concluded the whole subject was well understood by the voters of this town, and they only awaited an opportunity to carry their enlightened convictions into practical effect. By request, an article was accordingly inserted in the school warrants of districts No. 1 and 8, to unite and form a graded school. There was a full attendance of the voters at the respective school meetings, and the proposed union was defeated in district No. 1, and the article dismissed in No. 8. The objections they urged against the measure, were too frivolous for a moment's serious consideration. Miss Chase, the excellent teacher of the summer term in district No. 1, has furnished a list of the different classes she was required to hear daily during the six school hours. The whole number was 25; dividing the number of minutes in the six hours (360) less 10 for recess, 350, and you have 14 minutes for a class to leave their seats, take their position on the floor, recite and return to their seats again. What can a teacher do in 14 minutes, with a class in geography, grammar or written arithmetic? how much time is there for explaining and elucidating different points, or drilling the pupils at the blackboard? Now if this school was graded or united with No. 8, and divided according to the attainments of the pupils, there would be half of the number of classes in each school, and consequently more time for each class. There would be an obvious advantage in a division of scholars in discipline, a point of no mean consideration in these districts at the present time. The winter term in district No. 1, was taught by H. F. Hopkins, Esq. The remarks in his report are so apposite, and coming from one who has had a large experience in teaching and managing public schools, entitle them to an insertion in this report: "There is too much indifference on the part of the people of the district in regard to the school, and not enough pains taken to have pupils attend promptly. The house is also too small to accommodate the number of pupils, and there are no conveniences for recitations. Considering as I do, the subject of common school education as one of the first importance, not only to the pupils, but to the community, I would most earnestly recommend the grading of this district united with No. 8 if practicable, but grade the school any way. Too many pupils have attended during my short term for me to do anything like justice to, and I would suggest that if the district cannot build a school-house, or enlarge the present one, that an additional room be procured somewhere, especially for the winter term for the teaching of the primary department. There is also too much disposition on the part of the boys of the school to break up, and break down the district property, which I conclude comes from want of interest on the part of parents, and in a measure, because of impunity in former smashings up. Remedy—make the parents pay for any damage done by a pupil if wilful and malicious." The observation relative to the destructive propensities of the boys in No. 1, is peculiarly applicable to those in No. 8. Some means should be devised to prevent the school house and out-buildings from suffering any further detriment.

The manner of teaching penmanship in our schools is very defective and unscientific. The pupils learn from imitation without regard to any system; a teacher one term writing a full round hand, the next something very different, and the scholar is left to pick up something from a dozen or more different instructors, all writing to some extent at least, unlike. This is wrong; some regular system, from some scientifically arranged graded writing book should be used in all our schools, and it is earnestly recommended that parents provide their children with such books, and our teachers should be required to instruct from them. If this course be adopted, every pupil in a comparatively short time will become a good penman.

During the past year, Greene's grammar has been introduced into our schools in place of three or four different ones; a new impetus has been given to this much neglected branch, and there are now many more pupils engaged in its study.

If the same teachers who taught in districts No. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and Miss Chase in No. 7, could be employed again, it would be for the interests of those districts. A male teacher should be employed in the winter in Nos. 1 and 8.

DISTRICT NO. 8.

First and second terms—None. A very bad record for No. 8—discreditable to both scholars and parents.

A bill was introduced in our last Legislature, abolishing the office of prudential school committee. This is a move in the right direction; it should go further and abolish the district system altogether, and our schools should be established by a central committee, graded and located in the town in such a manner as would best accommodate the pupils, giving them the longest schools and the best instruction possible.

H. B. BURNHAM, S. S. Committee.
